AMBROSIA is a biannual publication by the INTERNATIONAL CULINARY INSTITUTE.

CONTRIBUTORS

KEE FOONG

A former editor of the LUXE City Guides and Discovery magazine, Hong Kong-based journalist Kee has an insatiable appetite for food and travel, one that has seen her hopscotch her way through every continent on earth. As happy driving in slow-speed eateries as he is at some of the finest restaurants in the world, for AMBROSIA he takes a culinary tour of Eastern Europe.

MAMIE CHEN

Mamie is a food writer and founding team member of Tasting Kitchen (TK) magazine. She contributes to various other publications as well as the Michelin Guide Hong Kong-Macau website. Mamie particularly enjoys interviewing chefs and delving into their passions and motivations. For this issue, she explores the renewed interest in food smoking.

PAYAL UTTAM

Payal is a freelance journalist currently based in Singapore. She has been writing about travel, food and culture across the globe, and editor who finds this a perfect excuse to be as nosy as possible, all the time. Specialized subjects include negronis, 90s B-sides and chilli sauce. For AMBROSIA she talks to the chefs who are going wild for alternative meats.

ANNA CUMMINS

A Brummie by name and Hongkonger by nature, Anna is a freelance lifestyle writer and editor who finds this a perfect excuse to be as nosy as possible, all the time. She contributes to various other publications, from The Wall Street Journal, CNN, Women’s Wear Daily, to Quartz, Forbes, The Art Newspaper and more. For AMBROSIA she means the chefs bringing more than food to the table.
